What is Google Dictionary? If your browser is Chrome you can get a dictionary with definitions in your choice of language. Find definitions for the word: double-click it or type it in the bar and hit enter. Read the definition in the pop up by double clicking or by choosing the pronunciation icon. Select the definition you want to get more information from clicking on the More info icon. Double-click it again to get back to the dictionary. Options The toolbar icon brings you options to configure the dictionary preferences. When you double-click a word you are looking up the definition is associated with that word. You can change this by selecting an alternative word in the menu on the left (or the word you entered in the bar) in the case that you are exploring the dictionary for the first time. The rules for the associations are: if you double-click a word, it is associated with that word. If you select or double-click a word, it is associated with that word in English. If you select or double-click a word and define an alternative word, it is associated with that word. You can also change the behavior of the dictionary using the options in the toolbar. You can choose to ignore words when you select or double-click them. Or you can always see the definition when you select or double-click a word. Paste the dictionary options If you want to copy the dictionary options that you have configured in one place you can paste them into the shortcut on your desktop. The settings you paste are saved with the default browser. They are persistent across your computer. Known issues Since the dictionary is still under development and version 1.0.0 has been released there are some known issues: Some words are not associated when they are spelt correctly (see this bug report) The pronunciation in the pop-up box is sometimes incorrect.
