A: 1) What is the code for the download counter? There's a script on the site that handles downloads. You can create your own, or you could just steal theirs. It's pretty simple, and a pretty good place to start hacking around. i.e. `function getCurrentDownloads(){ var jsondoc = "downloads as $download { $i++; echo "{$download->download_ID}"; } ?>"; document.write(jsondoc); } // get current downloads - maybe use a counter or something else // browser-resize function is just for testing purposes // re-trigger yourself every 40 seconds if you want to stop it eventually, I won't stop you. setInterval(function() { getCurrentDownloads(); }, 4000);` 2) How do I extract the file? There's a PHP shell that has extracted the file for you, in a separate folder. 3) What is this.dct file I see? That's the db field that holds the download_ID, the row id. The.dct file is only loaded when you first go to the site. Otherwise, that field is blank. 4) Is there a tutorial for how to make my own
