In the heart of old Quebec City is a district rich in history and numerous monuments that the residents of the capital are probably not aware of. Known for its wide and dark streets, the Saint-Jean-Baptiste district is a lively place that is home to many restaurants, food stands and shops. Many of the shops are concentrated around the intersection of Saint-Jean and Des Érables streets, while the main shopping areas are located around the intersection of Saint-Jean and Lajeunesse streets. The Saint-Jean-Baptiste district is also one of the longest buildings in the City of Quebec, stretching across Saint-Jean, Saint-Antoine and Des Érables streets and is home to more than 90 private residences. In a recent survey conducted by the City of Quebec, it was noted that «Le Petit-Québec» was one of the most visited areas in the City of Quebec. Certainly, it is a fascinating area of the capital that is home to many unique restaurants, each one with a different culinary style. It is also home to a variety of shops and businesses. A notable attraction that can be found in the Saint-Jean-Baptiste district is the Chapel of the Holy Angels. Built in the year 1838, this building is one of the many religious buildings in the area that were built at the same time. This building was initially a parish church of the Mission of the Immaculate Conception of the Holy Virgin Mary. It was then used as a military hospital before becoming

Ascorbate in the presence of ferrous ions appears to initiate a direct oxygen-independent cytotoxic process for the mouse leukemia line P388D1, but not for human U937 cells. This cytotoxic effect was blocked by the addition of catalase, indicating that the active agent is hydrogen peroxide. The cytotoxic response is not due to lipid peroxidation since the thiobarbituric acid method, an assay for conjugated diene production, revealed no differences between cells exposed to the drug and those exposed to the oxidant inducer cumene hydroperoxide. Lack of detectable thiobarbituric acid reactivity of the drug effect is not due to a failure of the assay. 0cc13bf012 new looking Health Care Bill was released. It contains a lot of changes and will be a mess if our legislators don't do their job and read it.

Here is a quick summary and my opinion about some of the new stuff: New parts of the health care bill: A "Cadillac Tax" which taxes high cost health plans ($8,000/$16,000/$24,000 for an individual/$38,000/$76,000 for families) and those that accumulate more than $10B in assets will be taxed. A “Medicare Surcharge” imposed on employers who don’t offer coverage. The “Tax Exempt Health Insurance” which allows unelected health care bureaucrats to make rules that will get added to the tax code. Medicare cut by $500b. This is done by limiting the increase in the age of eligibility. Creating a “tax free” fund for the states. My state will get $94b and that’s all the money it will get for health care. Insurance companies being required to spend 8% of each dollar on medical services to prevent their deductibles and co-pays. A tax increase of 3.8% on un-insured workers and 2.8% on small employers. Employer mandate. Increase in the Medicare age from 65 to 67, which will drive up the per capita cost of health care significantly. Repeal of the employer provisions of the ACA. Medicaid cuts to states Repeal of the individual mandate. No change in the tax code and no tax hikes. The President and Congress will be working together to deal with this new mess and some of the changes will need the full Senate to approve them. Staff at
