The rules of life : a personal code for living a better, happier, more successful life / Richard Templar . In the rules of life, Richard Templar, an attorney who teaches at business schools in the United States and abroad, prescribes a way of life that delivers freedom, quality.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a power supply circuit for a light emitting diode (LED) lamp, and more specifically, to a power supply circuit which is used for driving a current-type LED lamp. 2. Description of the Prior Art For an LED lamp, which is a new generation lighting device, the main parts of the whole lamp are light-emitting diodes. The light-emitting diode generally has a lower drive voltage and higher light intensity, so that the life span of the light-emitting diode is greater than that of a common bulb and the illuminating time is much longer. Therefore, the light-emitting diode lamp is widely used in different applications. Because the light-emitting diode is a current light source, in order to use the light-emitting diode in some applications, a constant current is first needed, so that the light emitting efficiency of the light-emitting diode is substantially the same as the conventional bulbs. Accordingly, a constant current circuit is necessary in the power supply circuit of the light-emitting diode lamp. Please refer to FIG. 1. FIG. 1 is a schematic diagram of a conventional constant current circuit. As shown in FIG. 1, the conventional constant current circuit is composed of four parts, a switch controller 10, a switch 12, a resistor 14, and a constant current circuit 16. The switch controller 10 is used for controlling a switch 12 by a constant current circuit 16. Specifically, the switch controller 10 comprises a current sense resistor 18 and a comparator 20, for sensing the forward voltage of the switch 12 and comparing the sensed voltage with the voltage across the current sense resistor 18, to control the switch 12 by the constant current circuit 16, so as to maintain a constant current and provide a constant current to the light-emitting diode. However, the diode manufactured and used in the current-type light-emitting diode lamp has a characteristic, and when the reverse current flowing through the diode is continuously applied, the diode may become inoperable. For example, the diode can become unserviceable when the forward voltage starts
