What's New In AutoCAD?

New right-click menu options: Modify tool properties Find more tool options Or add commands to menu There's even a new command to start an online video tutorial right in the Help menu. Link Management: Create a persistent reference to any object, or remove the link to the current drawing. (video: 0:53 min.) When drawing and exporting to PDF, you can now provide a URL to your rendering web server so that you can keep the reference to the object while you're offline. You can now keep objects linked to drawings from the same drawing or from other files on your computer in memory as a persistent reference. This can be particularly useful for referencing objects in other drawings or other files on your computer. Design Review: Your design is completed but you want to make sure that you captured the most important design decisions before you sign off. You can now review your entire drawing in a new Design Review viewer, and resolve items in one place. You can also annotate your drawing using the annotation toolbar and specify which objects to display in the annotation viewer. Newly added annotations, comments and linked objects can be reviewed in a new Design Review view. Animation: AutoCAD is now a fully vector-based product, which means you have even more freedom to make your drawings more expressive, such as by animating the view to create the illusion of depth. (video: 3:23 min.) With the new animations feature, you can render your drawing into an animated GIF image to take advantage of the ease of sharing GIFs today. You can select and animate any view, with more in the works. And what's new for Exporting to PDF: You can choose to export comments and annotations with your drawings to keep them with the drawing. This reduces the amount of metadata that's sent to the PDF, and allows the PDF reader to correctly understand the drawing. You can now export the drawing as a single PDF document without the multipart PDF view. Improved support for auto-arranging tables, with enhanced Auto-Arrange now available in the PDF Export dialog. You can now export images to PDF. Improved support for different languages and character sets. For Office support: New versions of Office are now available as AutoCAD Extension Pack. Markup Import:
