Back in the days (2005) we were answering questions about what comes after link sets. Well, several years have passed and now that we've reached 2010 we can say - much more questions and comments. For starters: In my opinion, link sets are too limited and there are many more ideas about what comes after link sets. The best thing in such situations is to create a Wiki list of Questions and comments for each Product/Project/Task/Whatever. A bold idea, but do-able, if well managed. Since this is a question about what comes next, I'll need your input on what comes next after link sets. By this I mean, what's your opinion about link sets? Are they the most productive or the most effective way to share informations, to discover new information, to enter conferences, to participate in discussions, to share an interest... on and on. I have to say that there are some similarities between "link sets" and "e-mails". It works well in some form, but some people find it quite a problem. One
