In this version, a combination of elements were incorporated into the core game flow of Grand Battle! Rush! whilst including compatibility with the TV anime. That is to say, each character, regardless of class, can be represented by default by their TV anime counterpart, with a few subtle distinctions. The stage appears immediately to be a direct reproduction of the TV anime, and each stage is populated by characters and objects lifted directly from the TV anime. [4] Similarly, by default, episodes in which certain characters had appeared were labelled as such. For those who wish to play the game as is, the alternate "High Stages" unlock screen can also be seen in this version. Being a remake, Grand Battle! Rush! is a completely different game. The same individual stages are played through repeatedly in order to unlock more, albeit with the addition of the bonus items of the TV anime. Most stages are identical to their TV anime counterparts. A few of the stages have additional elements, including hidden items and character promotions. All characters gain experience points upon defeating an opponent, as well as weekly cash, and are promoted in ascending levels of experience, each ranking level corresponding to that of their TV anime character. [5] Another feature of this version of Grand Battle! Rush! is the inclusion of two exclusive stages for use only in the game's Japanese edition. The first, Battle Princess , is an utterly pun-filled stage with a harem of anthropomorphic cartoon animals. The second, Gokabuto , is a fighting game played with a deck of playing cards. [6] This card battle game has one of the fastest turn-times in any of the Grand Battle! Rush! games. [7] The game ends when the cards are all used up, and the player with the most victory points is the victor. 5ec8ef588b
