baujis journey, on the other hand, is much more ambiguous. he starts off as a bitter old man, but he is gradually transformed into a man who can see the world for what it is, and who can finally come to terms with the reality that his beloveds have chosen to leave him. the film is beautifully shot by prasad masurkar, who also worked on the recent blockbuster taare zameen par, in which a small child learns about the world around him. he has an eye for a beautiful shot, and it would be great to see more movies from his end of the spectrum. the film will be released on october 12th the title, ankhon dekhi, means everything and nothing. it is fitting that the film is about two people who are related to each other by nothing, and who live in a city where everything is related to them, if not identical. in another film, mani kauls 1981 classic himmatwala, kalkattu kudumbam (the two titles were used interchangeably at the time) or kudumbam nee venum (the literal meaning is: a home amongst flowers), a woman comes to the city, and is shown how the city itself is really nothing. it is shaped by man, and man is shaped by the city. in the case of kapoors film, the city is the city of walled itself, where residents are enclosed by their own walls, and what goes on outside the city is irrelevant. kapoors aankhon dekhi is a film about how a man's reality can be constructed by his own mind. he can allow himself to be influenced by the outside world, but he also decides what he believes. in this sense, he is the city itself. and so, the film is not just about a city but about people and their dreams, their notions of belonging and of home. 5ec8ef588b
